OFFSET PROJECT CATEGORY OVERVIEW

Located in the Great Southern region of Western Australia, 170 hectares of permanent eucalyptus tree plantings have been strategically established across four farms between the towns of Quairading and Kojonup.

Planted in narrow belts and small blocks during 2012 and 2013 expressly for the purpose of carbon abatement, the trees are thriving and contributing to environmentally regenerative outcomes in the surrounding landscape that continues to be farmed by the landholder.

Reforestation has occurred primarily on light sandy patches of land, or along denuded stream banks. As the plantings mature and forest canopy is regenerated, a range of potential biodiversity co-benefits are achieved. With both the robust carbon removals and the potential to improve biodiversity outcomes in the project area, this reforestation initiative is a prime example of high-integrity nature-based climate change solutions.

The projects meet the following Sustainable Development Goals
